I. POLICY PURPOSE AND PRINCIPLES

A. Purpose

As a public research university, UC's mission includes the creation, dissemination, preservation, and application of knowledge for the betterment of global society. The University's academic community of faculty, students, and staff is characterized by a culture of interdisciplinary collaboration that is responsive to the needs of the larger multicultural and global community. The University is committed to academic freedom, which includes open access to information, free and lively debate conducted with mutual respect for individuals, and freedom from intolerance. These values extend to UC's international activities, which serve to enhance its international engagement in research, teaching, and service in an interconnected world.

The purpose of this Presidential Policy on International Activities (Policy) is to: support the academic mission by encouraging and supporting international collaboration, education, exploration, service, and research; protect the reputation of the University; provide a policy framework for international activities so that they can be established expeditiously and operate effectively; anticipate and manage the risks of international engagement; and guard the interests of faculty, students, and staff while engaged in international activities.

This Policy applies to all international activities at UC and clarifies which activities must be approved by the Regents or the UC Provost. The Policy does not impose any new approval or authorization requirements for international activities nor does it alter current approval or authorization requirements.

Barriers to international engagement should be low, and any UC faculty member, academic appointee, student, or staff member may initiate an international activity. Nevertheless, any international activity, typically conducted with the involvement of non-U.S. parties, presents the possibility of risk. While adherence to this Policy and to other University policies will mitigate the possibility of risk, the concepts listed below should be considered when conducting international activities, including by agreement with another institution, and when determining the approval level for such activity, including entering into formal agreements.

B. Principles

International activities at the University of California:

1. Advance the University's mission;
2. Uphold academic freedom and the dissemination of research and scholarship;
and
3. Contribute to the betterment of humankind.

C. Legality

All activities covered by this Policy must be in compliance with all applicable state and federal laws and regulations, University of California policies, and the laws and regulations of the foreign sites where they are conducted.

D. Covered activities

International activities, collaborations, and agreements between UC and international partner institutions can range widely in size and scope, from individual peer-to-peer collaborations to contractually-binding agreements that obligate UC and its partners to perform specific actions requiring substantial resources and long-term commitments. This Policy governs all such activities and sets forth the approval levels for the range of international activities conducted by UC faculty, students, and staff.

E. Autonomy and collaboration

UC should:

1. Sustain campus and UC location autonomy to develop international partnerships consistent with the focus and needs of the campus; and
2. Foster collaboration between and among University of California campuses and locations to leverage University resources.

7. Executive Officer

- i. The Executive Officer has approval authority as outlined in Regents' Standing Orders, as well as other authority that has been delegated by the Regents, the President, or the UC Provost in various Bylaws, Standing Orders, policies, delegations of authority, or specific Regents action items.
- ii. The Executive Officer assures that the Policy is implemented and enforced at his or her respective location.

V. PROCEDURES

A. Academic Oversight

The international activity must be consistent with the University's mission. The UC location should consider the quality, reputation, resources, business practices, and academic standing, if relevant, of the potential partner. The general scope and specific areas or fields of cooperation should be defined, e.g., is the activity focused on teaching, research, creative work, clinical care, training, public service, or a combination of areas. A proposal for an international activity presented for approval to the Regents, UC Provost, or Executive Officer must be supported by the individual with administrative authority over the proposal, e.g., Department Chair, Dean, ORU Director, etc. The proposal must include a commitment of responsibility for the activity from a member of the UC faculty.

Academic oversight, anticipated outcomes, and activity review and evaluation should be planned in advance of finalization of an agreement. The potential interest of, and the level of involvement and responsibilities of, faculty, students, and staff, should be specified, as should compliance with current departmental and other UC location procedures for approval of credit and time away from the UC location. Sabbatical and/or leave requests must be approved in advance, in accordance with existing policies and procedures. The parties responsible for admissions decisions, academic supervision, curriculum, degree requirements, student registration, permits, licenses, and fee payments must be designated in advance.

All partners must work with faculty, students, and staff to ensure compliance with all applicable UC and partnering site policies, and all applicable statutes, regulations, standards, and guidelines in the U.S. and in the site country. The international activities offices at UC locations should be consulted in advance in order to assure quality, transparency, and adherence to all applicable policies, statutes, and regulations.

B. Clinical Enterprises

The University of California is involved in a variety of clinical projects and partnerships around the world which are opportunities for faculty, staff, and students to improve health worldwide through public service. Agreements, partnerships, and collaborations for clinical services take many forms including professional services agreements, training affiliations, and teaming agreements.

All clinical service activities, regardless of size or nature, must comply with all applicable state and federal laws, UC policies, and site country laws, policies, standards, and guidelines.

Faculty, staff, and students must obtain site licensure or certification well in advance of arrival at the site if the intent is to practice licensed professions abroad, such as medicine, nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, laboratory science, and law. Failure to obtain local licensure or certification can be grounds for prosecution, and for liability for malpractice.

C. Risk

Risk can take many forms, and can range from personal to institutional. Risk can include: illness, injury, accident, natural disaster, breaches of data, damage to reputation, challenges to physical security, financial loss or mismanagement, and political unrest.

Risk factors must be considered when undertaking international activities. Depending on the nature of the activity, proposers of the activity should conduct a risk analysis and craft a plan to minimize, mitigate, and/or respond to specific risks prior to proceeding with the activity. The individual with administrative authority for the proposal should ensure that risk factors have been considered and that, if applicable, a risk analysis has been conducted.

D. Remedies

If a formal allegation is made that the University or a partnering institution engaged in unethical, unprofessional, or illegal conduct, or has contravened the principles of an agreement or of University policy by entering into a collaborative relationship, or by the conduct of any collaborative activity, then such allegation shall be reviewed by the Executive Officer or designee of the UC location that entered into the agreement. The Executive Officer or designee, in consultation with counsel and other experts, shall determine whether remedial steps, if any, are required.

E. Agreements

International activity agreements should indicate how the activity advances the UC mission, and describe institutional support for the activity at the UC location. Areas of responsibility at UC and at partnering institutions should be identified with regard to relevant matters (e.g., admissions decisions, academic supervision, collaborative research, funding sources, governance, fee structures, agreement sunseting or termination, etc.). Issues such as health; safety; intellectual property; export control; data security; insurance and indemnification; use of names, logos, and trademarks; employment; visas and travel; and housing should be anticipated and investigated with relevant UC administrative units.

F. Approval Authority

1. Applicability of Other Policies and Approval Processes - Approval authority for international activities does not replace other approval processes or routine consultations that may be required under other current UC policies and procedures, such as review by counsel, compliance approvals, Academic Senate review, and other relevant processes.
2. Approval Levels – There are three approval levels for international activities at UC:
 - a. Regents;
 - b. UC Provost; or
 - c. the Executive Officer or his or her designee at the UC location.Approval levels are based on risk, governance, resource commitment, already-existing Standing Orders and policies, and other factors.
3. Determining Approval Authority
 - i. UC Regents - Approval authority lies with the Regents for activities that:
 1. Involve facilities construction and/or the acquisition of real property by UC;
 2. Establish International Subsidiaries or Operations over which UC shares governance authority with another entity;
 3. Involve systemwide planning and assumption of obligations, with the potential for long-term involvement; and/or
 4. Present very high levels of financial or other risk.
 - ii. UC Provost - Approval authority lies with the UC Provost for activities that:
 1. Are in connection with UCEAP;
 2. Establish International Subsidiaries or Operations over which UC has majority governance authority; and/or
 3. Involve systemwide planning and/or assumption of obligations due to the scope of the academic and administrative activity.
 - iii. Executive Officer - Approval authority lies with the Executive Officer at the UC location or his or her designee for international activities conducted by UC locations that do not require Regents or UC Provost approval. These activities are part of the course and scope of the employment, education, and training of faculty, students, and staff, and include: collaborations between faculty and peers overseas; attendance at and participation in meetings and conferences; cooperative study programs; student exchanges; training development programs; faculty research and fieldwork; undergraduate and graduate student research and fieldwork; artistic, cultural, and scholarly exchanges; MOUs; and activities subject to binding legal agreements that are not within the approval purview of the UC Provost or Regents.

- iv. In those cases in which it is unclear which approval authority applies, project proposers are directed to consult the location's international activities office, campus or location counsel, the location's Risk Management office, and the Office of General Counsel.

G. Process

When proposing an international activity that requires approval by the Regents or the UC Provost, the Executive Officer of the UC location or his or her designee shall submit to the UC Provost:

- v. A proposed agreement with supporting documents;
- vi. A completed Checklist for Regents or UC Provost Approval of International Activities (Appendix A); and
- vii. Documentation that all relevant reviews have been obtained. Relevant reviews include academic review and legal review, and may also include review by campus or location offices of: Sponsored Research, International Activities, Risk Management, Divisional Senate, and Budget.

The Office of the UC Provost will review the submission and consult with the Office of General Counsel and the UC location if necessary.

VII. FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

1. Does every international activity require formal approval under this Policy?

No. The Policy does not impose any new approval or authorization requirements for international activities nor does it alter current approval or authorization requirements. Routine low-risk international activities that are part of the normal course and scope of faculty employment or a student's education that did not formerly require formal approval do not now require formal approval under this Policy. Examples of such activities include: collaborations between faculty and peers in foreign locations; attendance at and participation in meetings and conferences in foreign locations; and faculty and student research and fieldwork. Except for activities requiring Regents or UC Provost approval, each campus and UC location determines which international activities require formal approval under this Policy. To determine whether an international activity requires formal approval, consult the international activities office at your campus or UC location. Section VI.B lists administrative units for international activities at campuses and UC locations with hyperlinks to websites.
2. Whom can I consult concerning approval requirements for international activities?

You should consult the administrative unit that handles international activities at your campus or UC location concerning approval requirements for international activities. Links to international activities offices are listed in Section IV.B.1. In cases where approval authority is unclear, campus counsel and the Office of General Counsel at UCOP should be consulted.
3. What is an example of an international activity that requires Regents' approval?

A UC location affiliates with a foreign university to establish an International Subsidiary that is a research institute at the foreign university's site. The institute is incorporated and registered in the foreign jurisdiction as a nonprofit research and education institution, and governance of the institute is equally shared with the foreign university. Because UC shares governance of the research institute with the foreign university, Regents' approval is required.

4. What is an example of an international activity that requires UC Provost approval?

A UC location establishes an International Operation at a foreign site that is a research and education institute. The UC location collaborates with a local independent nonprofit organization to achieve the Operation's mission. Because UC has sole governance over the institute, Regents' approval is not required, but the UC location is establishing an International Operation and therefore UC Provost's approval is required.

5. What if laws in another country are more strict than U.S. law (e.g., regulations governing human subjects research, EU data directive, etc.)?

UC employees and students should comply with the stricter laws of the non-U.S. country in which they are conducting the activity. For choice of law questions, consult the international activities office at your campus or location and, if needed, legal counsel.

6. What if the country where the activity will take place does not have laws governing the activity but the activity is regulated in the U.S? Which jurisdiction's standards apply?

This will depend on the particular activity and on the particular U.S. laws. For legal jurisdiction questions, consult the international activities office at your campus or location and, if needed, legal counsel.

7. What if UC policy or U.S. laws conflict with the laws of the country where the activity will take place?

It depends on the specific laws and the nature of the conflict. For conflict of law questions, consult the international activities office at your campus or location and, if needed, legal counsel.

8. What are the rules governing the provision of clinical services?

When providing clinical services abroad, the paramount requirement for UC employees, trainees, and students is to cause no harm to patients, particularly due to inappropriate preparation and training. When engaged in providing clinical services abroad, UC employees, trainees, and students must not practice: 1) outside their scope of expertise; and 2) without the license required by the U.S. and the foreign site. For students, guidance on the practice of clinical care abroad can be found at the Association of American Medical Colleges "Guidelines for Premedical and Medical Students Providing Patient Care During Clinical Experiences Abroad" and the Forum on Education Abroad Guidelines for Undergraduate Health-Related Programs Abroad.
